Lifeline Ambulance Made Tort Claim Against HHS in 2018 –

Tripped Cabal Alarm in August 2018 with HHS Secretary

Aug 10,2018

Lifeline CEO Jim Jones triggered the cabal alarm in August 2018 at HHS by delivering a $140M Tort Claim to the Secretary. The claim essentially asserts, "I know you intentionally put me out of business in 2008, and I used your own data and records to prove it." Jones became aware that HHS targeted conservative states in the 2008 election but did not allege that at the time; he was still researching the extent of the targeting.

In May 2008, HHS abruptly stopped paying Lifeline after 21 years, along with hundreds of thousands of others, seemingly targeting only the private sector. Institutional and governmental providers appeared to be immune or unaffected. Jones did not immediately realize this but gradually learned the extent of the targeting over time. "It became a matter of continually running into people I knew who were no longer in business, all with the same story, or knowing someone to whom it had happened."

Jones shared his findings with his congressmen in 2015 and 2016 and continued digging as requested. "I've done the research, compiled it, and delivered." The Medicare Trust Fund might as well be called the Medicare Slush Fund; it was evidently used to propel Obama and Biden into office.

"When you examine the composition of the Trustees, everything becomes clear. A few special interest individuals – Labor, Wall Street, and the Democrats sitting next to the cabal – HHS and CMS, controlled the Medicare Trust Funds. In essence, does it make sense that HHS and CMS would hold positions as trustees when they are the primary beneficiaries, highlighting flaws in the system?"

After HHS and CMS ceased payments to Lifeline and others in 2008 without notice, they also disconnected their phones. The IRS levied them within 90 days without notice over alleged taxes related to the unpaid trust fund services and did not return calls. Within the same timeframe, the DOJ had CMS sue them over a fabricated overpayment claim that Lifeline would later win in court. "The cabal simply dismantled the company, leaving millions in unpaid health claims and stealing its services, all because its owner believes in free enterprise. This is the deep state at work."

"In retrospect, that 2018 Tort Claim should have been a Whistleblower Complaint," Jones concluded.
